Work-From-Home Employee Expectations & Checklist

Welcome to the team! As a professional organization, we are committed to high performance and continuous learning. Below are the guidelines and checklist for all work-from-home employees to ensure discipline, accountability, and effective communication.

Professional Expectations

1. Hard Work & Learning:

- We expect full dedication and commitment from every team member.
- You will have opportunities to learn new skills and get trained on our internal systems and processes.

2. Google Meet Availability:

- You must be present and available on Google Meet throughout your working hours.
- Staying connected and responsive is mandatory during work hours.

3. No Outdoor Activity During Work Hours:

- Since this is a full-time work-from-home role, you are expected to remain at your workstation during working hours.
- Going outside or being unavailable during work hours is not permitted.
- We have removed team members in the past for marking attendance but not being present.

4. Leave Policy:

- Sandwich Leave Not Allowed: Leaves on Friday and Monday are not allowed, as this results in an unapproved 3-day break (Friday to Sunday), affecting project continuity.
- Probation Period Leave Restriction: Only 2 leaves are allowed during your 3-month probation period. This is important for your training and onboarding.
- All leave requests must be made in advance and approved by your manager.

5. Daily Reporting:

- You must submit your daily work report by the end of each working day.
- Reports should clearly mention tasks completed, work in progress, and any blockers.

6. Email Communication:

- You are expected to check and respond to official emails regularly during working hours.
- Important communication should not be missed or delayed.

7. Professional Discipline:

- Timely task updates, availability, and consistent performance are expected.
- Any deviation from these expectations will be taken seriously.

8. Exit Policy:

- Developers are expected to meet company performance standards and adhere to organizational practices. In cases of non-performance or inefficiency, a prior warning will be issued.
- To support new hires, we provide structured process training, mentorship from senior developers, and guidance on company practices and workflows.
- If an employee is terminated during the probation period due to non-performance or failure to comply with company norms, they will not be required to serve a notice period, nor will they be entitled to salary for the month of termination.
- This policy ensures that only committed and responsible candidates continue with the organization, while also safeguarding the company's investment of time and resources during the training and probation phase.

Daily Checklist

- Logged in and present on Google Meet during work hours
- Workspace is quiet and free of distractions
- Tasks for the day acknowledged and being executed
- Attendance marked accurately
- Submitted daily report by end of day
- Responded to all relevant emails within work hours
- Actively communicated with the team
- No unapproved breaks or outdoor activity during work hours
- Adhered to company policies and professional conduct.
